Ike Asks $4,175m. In Foreign Aid Bill

WASHINGTON. — President Eisenhower on Tuesday asked Congress to approve a foreign aid program for the coming year amounting to $4,175m. This compares with the $3,930 for which he asked last year.

The request faces heavy fire in Congress, which year after year has cut the President's aid programs by 10 to 20 per cent.

Mr. Eisenhower also announced plans for a concentrated injection of U.S. aid into the economies of India, Pakistan and Nationalist China to help those nations demonstrate that Asia can achieve a better life without resort to Communism.

Rejects Argument
Rejecting in advance the argument that disarmament negotiations and moves towards ending the cold war reduce the need for big military aid spending, the President said: "While over the past year the Soviet Union has expressed an interest in measures to reduce the common peril of war and while its recent deportment and pronouncements suggest the possible opening of a new era of peace, the fact remains that the Soviet Union is still a major threat to the peace of the world."

Mr. K' in Burma Urges Arms Cuts
RANGOON (Reuters). — Mr. Nikita Khrushchev arrived here yesterday from India and renewed his "peace and general disarmament" plan in an airport speech.

President Win Aung, Prime Minister Ne Win and members of the Cabinet and Diplomatic Corps greeted the Soviet Premier. A crowd of about 2,000 applauded as Mr. Khrushchev appeared, grinning broadly and waving his cream Panama hat.

Move Forward
Western conference sources described the plan as "a slight move forward" by the Russian side.

Putting forward the Soviet side of yesterday's action, Mr. Khrushchev said that during the two or three years after the treaty had been signed, experts from East and West should carry out joint research into disarmament with the aim of constantly improving existing criteria.

Burning Issue
The most burning issue facing all nations and governments is that of achieving a universal and lasting peace.

African Peoples
President Eisenhower also referred to the "self-governing" of the great continent of Africa, especially in the area south of the Sahara, and said that "this vast area deserves and commands the full attention and assistance of the free world."

Referring to the special assistance items in his program, the President said: "Such provisions will enable us, for example, to continue aid to the young nations of Morocco, Libya and Tunisia to strengthen the stability of Jordan and the Middle East, to combat the microclimate of Communist influence in Afghanistan, to help the economies of Bolivia and Haiti. Special assistance will also enable our continued program in such vital programs as malaria, under-feeding, and anti-malaria campaign."

Among the main items of the program are: $724m. for defense support; $285m. for special assistance projects; $122m. in technical assistance; $700m. for the Development Loan Fund; $175m. for a contingency fund; and $10m. for the Children's Fund, refugee programs, and foreign programs for peaceful use of atomic energy.

U.K. Defence Budget Totals £1,617m.
LONDON (Reuters). — Britain's defence budget for the coming year is up by £125m. The Government announced on Tuesday. It will amount to £1,617m. in 1968-69, the annual report (White Paper) on defence disclosed.

The report says the increase is in part due to the inclusion of certain expenditure hitherto borne by other Government accounts.

It says the development of the British ballistic missile, the Blue Streak, is continuing but it may be decided not to rely exclusively on fixed-site missiles. The possibility of long-range delivery of missiles from mobile launchers, such as aircraft or submarines, is being investigated.

Soviets Reject U.S. Proposals On Test Ban

GENEVA (Reuters). — The Soviet Union yesterday formally rejected President Eisenhower's plan for a limited nuclear test ban and put forward its own proposals instead.

Mr. Semyon Tsaraphin, Soviet delegate to the test ban talks here, put forward the new Russian plan at a 40-minute session and, at a press conference later, said America's approach was entirely opposite to Russia's.

The Russian plan is that a comprehensive East-West test ban treaty should be based on control of underground explosions by means of all the criteria (instrument readings) on which agreement could be reached at present.

Move Forward
Western conference sources described the plan as "a slight move forward" by the Russian side.

Putting forward the Soviet side of yesterday's action, Mr. Tsaraphin said that during the two or three years after the treaty had been signed, experts from East and West should carry out joint research into disarmament with the aim of constantly improving existing criteria.

France Must Continue Her Atom Blasts, Macmillan Says

LONDON. — Prime Minister Macmillan on Tuesday expressed the opinion that France will have to maintain her policy of continuing her nuclear test explosions.

Mr. Macmillan made the statement in answer to a question after an address commemorating the recent visit of the French President, Charles de Gaulle, to the British House of Commons.

Quarrelling on the possible danger to the Geneva nuclear talks caused by the French explosion, Mr. Macmillan pointed out that France believed she was right in carrying out the test, and added that he believed it would be a mistake for her to change her policy.

Meanwhile, Moroccan sources in Paris said yesterday that the decision to recall the Moroccan Ambassador in protest against the French test was not a breach of diplomatic relations between the two countries, but it was not possible yet to forecast how long the recall would be away from Paris, they added.

Probe into Revolt Moved to Paris
PARIS (Reuters). — France's appeal court, the Cour de Cassation, yesterday ruled that the judicial inquiry against the settler insurgency in Algeria should be moved from Algiers to Paris for reasons of public order.

The French Minister of Justice, Edgar Pisani, requested the transfer on the grounds that "the atmosphere might hinder the normal course of justice" and that there was "a political significance in the postponement of the trial."

The men charged with attempts against the internal security of the state, or complicity, are at present being held in Algiers. They are expected to be transferred to Paris by the end of this week.

U.S. Sees Commercial A-Energy by 1968
WASHINGTON (Reuters). — The Atomic Energy Commission today Congress yesterday that by 1968 it hoped to produce nuclear power from reactors at a cost of about 10¢ per kilowatt-hour.

It defined high cost energy areas as those where fossil fuels now cost more than 10¢ per kilowatt-hour, or more.

The commission said total nuclear and development costs for nuclear reactors in the coming year will be between $150m. and $200m. annually. This would include the cost of commercial scale plants.

The A.E.C. made these statements in a report on the civilian power reactor development program to the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy, which opened hearings yesterday on the atomic energy industry.

El Al Likely to Fly Boeing Jet Airliners This Summer
TEL AVIV. — El Al will this summer fly Boeing 707 long-range jet airliners, if current negotiations in New York with Varig, the Brazilian National Airline, are successful. It was learned from reliable sources on Tuesday.

The Transport Ministry is expected next week to authorize joint use of two Boeing 707 jets with the Brazilian airline. El Al is expected to use the jets to fly to Rio de Janeiro and to this country. Varig, who purchased them, would, under the arrangement, fly the planes from New York to South America.

The Government is expected to follow through with the purchase of 707s directly from the manufacturer, with delivery expected in about 18 months. Meanwhile, El Al will probably also continue to operate Britannia turboprop aircraft. The Atlantic, with a summer schedule of six weekly flights to New York.

The 707s cruise at about 500 k.p.h. compared to the 400 k.p.h. of the Britannia. El Al hopes to sell its four Constellation piston planes and to operate exclusively with the jets and turboprops.

The model acquired by the Brazilian airline is the Boeing 707, series 420, the most modern in production. Mr. Yosef Peleg, El Al's Chief of Operations, and Mr. Louis Pedretti, El Al's Chief Engineer, are now in New York negotiating with the Brazilian airline representatives. They are expected to return here within a few days.

Inge Toft Due in Haifa Today After 10 Months

HAIFA. — The Danish freighter Inge Toft is expected here today. The ship left Port Said on Monday after having been detained by the Egyptians for 10 months because her master, Captain E. V. Schultz, refused to unload her Israeli cargo there.

Last week the owners of the 1,500-ton freighter ordered Captain Schultz to unload the cargo in the form of continued detention by the U.N. against Egyptian violation of the international right of free navigation. It is expected that the vessel, which sailed from Haifa on May 10, 1967, will be given a warm welcome to the port of Haifa today.

After its 10-month detention the ship will be carrying and other cargo of wheat, oil, and other goods. It is expected that she will be able to work on the regular schedule of the port.

PORT POLINA (Reuters). — The decision of U.N.T.S.O. Headquarters to convene the Israel-Syrian Mixed Armistice Commission despite Israel's prior announcement that the M.A.C. meeting would be held in Jerusalem, was considered by political observers in Jerusalem as a M.A.C. acquiescence to the U.N. in Syrian claims regarding the Commission's location.

Young Nigerian Statesman

Israel's approach in assisting other nations on a partnership basis was yesterday termed "very sound" by Mr. Aminu Kano, a 37-year-old Moslem member of the Nigerian Federal Parliament, who is now in Israel. "In an age of suspicion, this is the only reasonable way to foster international cooperation with formerly colonial people," he said.

The fact that the majority of Nigeria's population is Moslem will hardly influence my country's policy, and I expect full diplomatic relations between Israel and Nigeria to be established shortly after we reach independence on October 1 this year," the young African statesman stressed.

There was a symbolic union in Mr. Kano's dress. On his head he wore a red Moslem turban, while on his lapel were pinned the colors of the Nigerian flag. "Youth education and the use of arms training for cementing Nigeria's unity is one of my main interests," he said. "I have been in the field in Nigeria, and I am sure that the use of arms training is the only way to achieve peace and stability in this country."

His forthright visit here is on behalf of the N.C.N.C., N.E.P.U. Alliance, which is a coalition party in the Federal Government together with the Northern People's Congress (N.P.C.). The National Council of Nigeria and the Cameroons (N.C.N.C.), the party led by the Prime Minister of the Eastern Province, Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe, and the Northern Elements Progressive Union (N.E.P.U.), which is the minority party in the Northern Province, formed an alliance prior to last December's general elections. Mr. Kano, who is one of the party's seven members in Parliament.

One Opposition Party. The only opposition party is the Action Group Party in the Western Province led by Chief Obafemi Awolowo. The Alliance strives for a more centralized federal government with a national council and a strong central government, and are against the alignment with any of the major political and military blocs. At the same time, they are in favor of the federal system, and are not divorced from the struggle for African freedom. Mr. Kano said in explanation of the major election. But the N.P.C., Nigeria's strongest party, as well as the Action Group opposition, are of the view that the federal system is the only way to achieve peace and stability in this country.

Meanwhile, the Prime Minister, Gen. Karim Kassem, yesterday praised the close friendship between Iraq and the Soviet Union in a short speech at the inauguration of work on the new broad-gauge railway line from Baghdad to Basra.

Shipyard Planning Shuts Bayside Road

HAIFA. — The preliminary earth-works for the Transport Ministry's shipyard project will close Julius Simon Road, a traffic artery for the industrial zone, as of February 25. The No. 58 bus service, which runs through the road, will be suspended.

Enterprises employing well over a thousand workers will be seriously hit. The workers as well as the thousands of finished products travelling the road every month will now have to take the four-kilometre longer roundabout route.

The plans for the shipyard are said not to be final, and no definite time-table has yet been set.

It is already the second interference, at short notice, with the flow of traffic to and from the zone in which are four of the city's largest ships which require to be moved some 15 dockings annually.

Tragedy Leads To Elephant For Zoo

The Jerusalem Biblical Zoo is soon to have a young elephant from India.

The story behind the gift goes back to April, 1958, when 13-year-old Richard Dick, of New York City, died in a "rare medical accident."

Richard's picture was in the newspapers when he was six years old. Polio vaccine was new then, and his class was chosen for a pilot project. The boy who was chosen to be first in line when the vaccine was administered, started to cry. Richard — the newspaper called him the "Lion Hearted" — stepped up and said, "Take me first."

When he died, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Dick, wanted a memorial for him. Hearing that Dr. Richard Dick, Director of the Biblical Zoo, had set up a fund to buy an elephant, the Dicks decided to raise the money.

But the price of an elephant, plus transport costs and a trainer's wages, were so high, that they temporarily abandoned the project.

A story about their plight recently appeared in the Women's League "Outlook," and their private campaign took on new life. Their friends, Charlotte and Rip Klein, who run the Worldwide Animal and Reptile Imports, offered to obtain the elephant at cost, and donations and pledges were made.

Mrs. Dick recently wrote Dr. Shulov: "As soon as the money is raised the elephant will be flown to you with a trainer... We hope we will be able to write the good news soon."

Moslem Religious Judges Hold Discussion With Rabbi Toledano

The Moslem community's three kadis (Religious Court judges) met in Jerusalem yesterday with the Minister for Religious Affairs, Rabbi Y.M. Toledano, to discuss communal questions. It was their first call on the Minister since elections, an earlier meeting having been postponed owing to his illness.

The discussion was held in Arabic except for an occasional Hebrew phrase from Rabbi Toledano, whose familiarity with Moslem customs helped to create an immediate friendly atmosphere. A Ministry spokesman said later.

The kadis of Acre, Sheikh Musa al-Tabari; of the Little Triangle, Sheikh Hassan Amin al-Habash, and of Jaffa, Sheikh Tahar Hamad, the fourth kadi, of Nazareth, died last year, congratulated Rabbi Toledano on remaining in office and presented a number of requests. These included continued repairs to mosque walls and clover fields and gardens are also being planted.

Kaf Kana will be the "Abu Yeha" of the book, "The Bridge" which "Gan Daphne" will stand for the bridge over the River Kana. The Attila migrant camp will be turned into "Kana" and the Cyprus transit camp which figures in "Exodus" will be turned into "Kana".

Six of Mr. Preminger's technicians have been here for the past three weeks making preparations for the shooting of the film, which is scheduled to start on March 28, Miss Money said.

Mr. Preminger will arrive here at the end of this month, and the leading actors, Paul Newman and Eve Marie Saint, will come in mid-March.

Mr. Preminger and his technicians have been approached by a large number of aspiring local actors, seeking roles in the film. The members of the film unit are still looking for a suitable ship to represent the "Exodus" and have been looking over likely vessels in Greek and Turkish ports, as well as Haifa.

Shooting of 'Kana' To Start in May

Jerusalem Post Reporter. TEL AVIV. — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will start shooting "Kana" in May. The film is based on the book by Herbert Rosenthal and Mark Hellman, two Israelis.

Mr. George Toledano, the playwright, said recently that he expects to complete the film script in April.

Joanne Woodward, the star of "The Three Faces of Eve," will most probably play the lead Christian Jaque in directing the film, his first for Hollywood.

Speeding Waki Bill

The delegation then asked for hastening of the passage of the Waki Bill to create trustee committees in seven Moslem centres to administer property endowed to the Moslem communities. The property is now administered by the Development Authority which was set up by the Moslem religious and communal needs. The bill received its first reading in the previous Knesset, and is now being dealt with by the Finance Committee.

After one of the kadis declared that he had heard the bill had been "buried," Rabbi Toledano told the delegation that it was in fact on the agenda of the present Knesset. The kadis expressly favoured State Controller supervision of the proposed trustee committees.

In addition, the kadis, voicing their appreciation of the opening by the Ministry of Welfare of the Moslem orphanage in Acre, asked that Moslem representatives have a larger share in its management and in the acceptance of orphans.

The kadis left the meeting to sit in the Ministry building as a court of appeals, each case being heard by the two kadis who had not tried it originally in the lower court.

'K' Dodges Query On Family Reunion

ROME (INA). — Mr. Khrushchev evaded giving a clear answer when asked recently whether Soviet citizens might in the near future be allowed to leave Russia and join their families living abroad.

The question was posed by the Jewish Telegraphic Agency's Rome correspondent, Tullia Zevi, who accompanied President Gronchi of Italy on his recent official visit to Moscow.

Approaching the Soviet Premier at a Kremlin reception, the correspondent was told by Mr. Khrushchev, with evident annoyance: "Soviet citizens are already allowed to leave the country and will be allowed to do so even more in the future. But going abroad requires an accumulation of wealth and the availability of cash. We are rich in natural resources, yet individually we are poor."

Army Overlooked Recruit 7 Years

TEL AVIV. — A resident of Kfar Szyk who had been found for failing to report for induction to the reserves for seven years on Monday won his appeal to the District Court on the grounds that he had merely followed instructions.

Mr. Pinhas Zindenberg, aged 36, passed his physical in 1950 and was told to wait further instructions. Seven years later, when he applied for an exit visa, the fact that he was not serving in the reserves came out.

The Petah Tikva Magistrate rejected his claim that he was still waiting for a notice from the draft board, and fined him IL500.

On Monday, the District Court, composed of Judges Avissar, Harpaz and Gorenblat, expressed its amazement that the Magistrate had not accepted Mr. Zindenberg's story. The fact that the accused could not possibly have known that the baphazard when he reported for his physical, and that he should have been given the benefit of the doubt with regard to his good faith, (Hina).

Tragedy Leads To Elephant For Zoo

The Jerusalem Biblical Zoo is soon to have a young elephant from India.

The story behind the gift goes back to April, 1958, when 13-year-old Richard Dick, of New York City, died in a "rare medical accident."

Richard's picture was in the newspapers when he was six years old. Polio vaccine was new then, and his class was chosen for a pilot project. The boy who was chosen to be first in line when the vaccine was administered, started to cry. Richard — the newspaper called him the "Lion Hearted" — stepped up and said, "Take me first."

When he died, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Dick, wanted a memorial for him. Hearing that Dr. Richard Dick, Director of the Biblical Zoo, had set up a fund to buy an elephant, the Dicks decided to raise the money.

But the price of an elephant, plus transport costs and a trainer's wages, were so high, that they temporarily abandoned the project.

A story about their plight recently appeared in the Women's League "Outlook," and their private campaign took on new life. Their friends, Charlotte and Rip Klein, who run the Worldwide Animal and Reptile Imports, offered to obtain the elephant at cost, and donations and pledges were made.

Mrs. Dick recently wrote Dr. Shulov: "As soon as the money is raised the elephant will be flown to you with a trainer... We hope we will be able to write the good news soon."

Moslem Religious Judges Hold Discussion With Rabbi Toledano

The Moslem community's three kadis (Religious Court judges) met in Jerusalem yesterday with the Minister for Religious Affairs, Rabbi Y.M. Toledano, to discuss communal questions. It was their first call on the Minister since elections, an earlier meeting having been postponed owing to his illness.

The discussion was held in Arabic except for an occasional Hebrew phrase from Rabbi Toledano, whose familiarity with Moslem customs helped to create an immediate friendly atmosphere. A Ministry spokesman said later.

The kadis of Acre, Sheikh Musa al-Tabari; of the Little Triangle, Sheikh Hassan Amin al-Habash, and of Jaffa, Sheikh Tahar Hamad, the fourth kadi, of Nazareth, died last year, congratulated Rabbi Toledano on remaining in office and presented a number of requests. These included continued repairs to mosque walls and clover fields and gardens are also being planted.

Kaf Kana will be the "Abu Yeha" of the book, "The Bridge" which "Gan Daphne" will stand for the bridge over the River Kana. The Attila migrant camp will be turned into "Kana" and the Cyprus transit camp which figures in "Exodus" will be turned into "Kana".

Six of Mr. Preminger's technicians have been here for the past three weeks making preparations for the shooting of the film, which is scheduled to start on March 28, Miss Money said.

Mr. Preminger will arrive here at the end of this month, and the leading actors, Paul Newman and Eve Marie Saint, will come in mid-March.

Mr. Preminger and his technicians have been approached by a large number of aspiring local actors, seeking roles in the film. The members of the film unit are still looking for a suitable ship to represent the "Exodus" and have been looking over likely vessels in Greek and Turkish ports, as well as Haifa.

Shooting of 'Kana' To Start in May

Jerusalem Post Reporter. TEL AVIV. — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will start shooting "Kana" in May. The film is based on the book by Herbert Rosenthal and Mark Hellman, two Israelis.

Mr. George Toledano, the playwright, said recently that he expects to complete the film script in April.

Joanne Woodward, the star of "The Three Faces of Eve," will most probably play the lead Christian Jaque in directing the film, his first for Hollywood.

Speeding Waki Bill

The delegation then asked for hastening of the passage of the Waki Bill to create trustee committees in seven Moslem centres to administer property endowed to the Moslem communities. The property is now administered by the Development Authority which was set up by the Moslem religious and communal needs. The bill received its first reading in the previous Knesset, and is now being dealt with by the Finance Committee.

After one of the kadis declared that he had heard the bill had been "buried," Rabbi Toledano told the delegation that it was in fact on the agenda of the present Knesset. The kadis expressly favoured State Controller supervision of the proposed trustee committees.

In addition, the kadis, voicing their appreciation of the opening by the Ministry of Welfare of the Moslem orphanage in Acre, asked that Moslem representatives have a larger share in its management and in the acceptance of orphans.

The kadis left the meeting to sit in the Ministry building as a court of appeals, each case being heard by the two kadis who had not tried it originally in the lower court.

Dayan Protests Cuts In Agricultural Development

Jerusalem Post Knesset Reporter

Minister of Agriculture Moshe Dayan declared yesterday that the development budget for agriculture fell short of meeting development requirements. He said that if the same amount were to be invested in development projects, we should have to cut down on the ordinary budget and seek funds here and abroad to carry out these projects.

Aluf Dayan was presenting his Ministry's proposed budget for the coming year. The Ministry's ordinary budget amounts to IL12m, and the development budget of IL12m.

The sum of IL24m was needed to implement plans for water projects in the next four years — or IL24m, as was needed in 1959/60. But the amount actually allocated in the budget was IL22m, a deficit of IL2m.

Aluf Dayan said he did not agree with the Ministry's budget for the coming year. He believed that the development of water resources, accompanied by economic use and efficient exploitation, would make possible the expansion of irrigated areas as well as the supply required for industrial development and the daily needs of the growing population.

Believes in Boards

Discussing dropping farm income, the Minister said he believed the best solution to be the regulation of production and the fixing of minimum prices by agreement between the Government and producers through production and marketing boards.

In the near future, marketing boards would be established for fruit and grapes, Aluf Dayan said. He indicated his belief that legal status should be accorded to the boards for eggs and poultry, milk and dairy products, cotton, and cattle for meat.

The Minister called for a re-examination of the quota of land fixed as the basis for a farm unit. In certain areas and certain types of farms, this quota should be raised. The question required basic study, he admitted, but said he wished to put the Ministry's position on the record at this point.

Discussing citrus, Aluf Dayan said that the Ministry had this year from 300,000 to 400,000 tons of citrus fruit.

Bill to Extend Life

Of Rabbinate Fails

The Knesset last night defeated a private member's bill of Mr. Zvi Zimmerman (General Zionists), which would grant continuity to the Rabbinate Council.

This would mean that a Council would continue to serve — even after its term of office — even after its term of office.

Mr. Zimmerman said his bill had no direct connection with the present dispute over the Rabbinate Council.

An important constitutional question was involved, and all sorts of legal difficulties would arise if a vacuum were permitted to form, as it would on February 23 if nothing were done.

Opposing the bill, the Minister for Religious Affairs, Rabbi Y. Teichman, blamed the Council for not having complied with his request to name its representatives to the election committee.

Mr. Zimmerman said in reply that it was extremely doubtful whether the Minister had the right to demand such a regulation.

The bill was defeated by a vote of 29-17. It was supported by the General Zionists, Herut and Agudat Yisrael.

Aguda, although the National Religious Party voted with the rest of the Coalition against the bill.

Members — Dr. E. Wahrhaftig and Mr. F. Zaures — abstained. As for Mr. Binyamin Shechter, it was difficult to tell whether he was really voting against the bill or merely scratching his ear.

Venezuelan Praises

He was addressing a dinner given in his honor by the Central Institute for Cultural Relations Israel-Thero-America, of which he was President in Venezuela.

Mr. Picon Salas is here on a ten-day visit as guests of the Government.

Dr. Picon said that "Israel, it is true, is small, but she has given humanity much wealth which cannot be counted for all the treasures of King Solomon's palace — and that is: a moral consciousness."

Opening of Tel Aviv Hospital To Take Nine More Months

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The opening of the Rehavia Municipal Hospital — under construction for nine years — has been postponed for another nine months by decision of a committee of experts appointed by Mayor Namir last month. It had originally been planned to open the capital some six months ago.

The group, headed by Prof. H. Heller of Tel Aviv Hospital, held a press conference at the hospital site last night. The group, which includes a blood bank, first aid and reception wards, a pharmacy and administrative offices.

The committee offered much of last year's Municipal Opposition claims (then made by left-wing factions) who opposed premature opening of the hospital for the same reason. But it also appeared that some charges — particularly about inflated construction costs — were exaggerated.

The final cost of the Rehavia hospital is now not expected to be more than IL1.5m, Deputy Mayor M. Heller, in charge of the Municipality's Health Department, estimated that the investment would amount to IL1.5m, compared to the IL1.5m for the Rehavia Hospital and IL1.5m for the Rehavia Hospital.

All necessary equipment has now been ordered.

90-ton trailer, Gal On (left), reached Elia yesterday morning after the electric wires at the entrance to the town were raised to let it pass. This was the end of a seven-day overland journey from Haifa. The 14-metre boat, which has been used by Kibbutz Nahsholim for Mediterranean fishing for the past three years, will be put in service in the Red Sea by the Yotvata fishing cooperative. The boat at the right is a 15-ton tug which arrived in Elia on Sunday and is already in use. The picture was taken south of Natanya.

Nazareth Taxing Church Property

Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAZARETH. — Monasteries and convents, which own one-third of Nazareth's 8,000 dunams, will have to start paying Municipal taxes from April, a Town Hall Official said yesterday.

Churches will still be exempt.

Archbishop George Hakim is reported to have approved the step taken by the new Municipal Council, which consists of 15 members.

Other community heads have expressed their readiness to pay local rates to help finance the town's development.

Christian religious establishments were first exempted from payment of local rates by the Turkish Government in 1905 under an agreement between the Ottoman and the French governments.

The exemption was later confirmed in June 1925 by the British High Commissioner.

The institutions will be taxed at the start of 55 per cent of the general Municipal rates. The additional annual revenue is estimated at IL20,000.

Nazareth, a town of 25,000 inhabitants, has 25 monasteries and convents.

An order nisi calling on the Haifa Municipal Council and Executive to show cause why they should not rescind the dismissal of Mr. Thomas Wind and his son another hearing by the Supreme Court sitting at the High Court of Justice.

Mr. Wind, former draughtsman in the Town Planning Department, was summarily dismissed without severance pay in June, 1959, on charges that he had accepted bribes.

He was acquitted of the charges in the Haifa District Court last December.

In January, the Municipality decided not to reinstate Wind because he had allegedly engaged in private work while a Municipal employee.

YOSIE SPRINZAK, who died a year ago today, was both Speaker of the Knesset and the Zionist Memorial Council, and this dual role was characteristic of his personality — an architect of the State of Israel, yet always a man of the Jewish people. As a tribute to his memory, the Sprinzak building is to be erected on the Hebrew University campus as a joint enterprise of the Government, the Knesset and the World Zionist Organization. No more appropriate content could have been found than the Institute for Contemporary Jewry which the new building is to house.

This Institute, recently inaugurated at the Hebrew University, is a visionary innovation which can fill a very real need. Jewish thinkers and leaders are concerned over indications of a cultural rift between Israel and the Diaspora. If this trend is not quickly checked, the consequences for the Jewish people may be tragic. For our part, we tend to worry about a lack of feeling for Israel on the part of Jews abroad, whilst forgetting the other side of the picture — an appreciation of the Diaspora and its contribution to Jewish life among our own youth. The situation, moreover, is not helped by the easy disregard of Jewish life in the Diaspora by some of our leaders.

A first step towards inculcating a proper appreciation of Jewish values among young people was the introduction of the "Jewish Consciousness" programme in the schools. The new Institute is, to a large extent, a natural corollary of this general aim. Its graduates will be properly equipped to convey a feeling for the integrity and values of the Jewish people when they themselves come to serve — whether as scholars engaged in higher education, teachers in our schools or representatives of the country abroad.

The programme of the Institute is ambitious, but it would be unwise and unacademic to expect quick results. Its head, Professor Moshe Davis, has summarized its aims as "the dissemination and collation of accurate information and the probing of the underlying forces and motivations of the World Jewish Community." In fulfillment of its aims the Institute has already embarked on its teaching and research programmes. Hebrew University students are already taking courses in various facets of contemporary Jewry in their M.A. courses. The research projects include the preparation of surveys reflecting the life and problems of typical, but varying, Jewish communities (the initial studies will deal with London, Buenos Aires and Algiers). Scientific studies will be published as well as a series of more popular booklets intended to serve as a basis for adult education courses on the subject throughout the world — this illustrates the intention of the Institute to reach out to Jews in all countries (and it is hoped that Jewish scholars and communal workers from abroad will attend special courses of the Institute in Jerusalem). A pioneering venture will be the Department of Oral History which will record the views and experiences of individuals who have played a prominent part in historical events or processes and whose invaluable contributions to historical research would be lost if the initiative were not taken to record it (in this connection it is sad to reflect what a goldmine of information this nature was lost with the passing of Yosef Sprinzak).

It is also encouraging that the Institute is planning active cooperation with other bodies in parallel spheres. One of the best examples is the fact that Jewish Historical General Archives will also be housed in the Sprinzak building, whose cornerstone is being laid today and whose rich archival material will be readily available to scholars of the Institute. It is hoped that in the new venture any duplication of effort will be avoided and that the Institute will be able to present a more complete picture of Jewish history and culture.

DE GAULLE MAKES CLEAN SWEEP

AT THE Palace of Justice in Paris ten examining magistrates, under the orders of their chief, Magistrate Robert Magnin, are feverishly studying documents seized during searches carried out throughout France. So far 118 raids have been launched on the orders of Magistrate Magnin; and though only a small number of persons have actually been arrested, the leaders of the extreme Right, the leaders of which may well consider themselves in danger when the war against them is launched against them or not. The activist movements of Algeria have been largely outlawed, and their counterparts in Metropolitan France effectively paralyzed.

After succeeding in Algeria, President de Gaulle acted without delay to turn his success into victory; having taught the French nation after the debacle of 1940 not to despair of turning the tables on the enemy, he does not intend to give the enemy the opportunity to try again.

The Socialist party was charged of according to the Government dictatorial powers; but President de Gaulle confided in M. Guy Mollet that De Gaulle really intended to purge the administration, the army and the courts, beginning with the Cabinet itself. "I understand your unwillingness to give extraordinary powers to M. De Gaulle, but you must understand that it is to me you are granting them," he said explicitly.

Loyalty Test

For De Gaulle the seven days of the revolt were a supreme test of the loyalty of his close collaborators — and while some of them passed with flying colours, others failed lamentably as the changes in the Cabinet show.

The behaviour of Ministers at the crucial Cabinet sessions was not the only indication of their loyalty. Bernard Cornut-Gentile, who was Minister of Posts, was among those who tried to provide for every contingency by establishing multiple contacts during the days when it seemed that De Gaulle might falter; he received M. Le Pen, the extremist member of the National Assembly, and an open accomplice of the insurgents, and expressed to him his full sympathy with "the cause." Naturally enough he was not included in the new Government, and it is a new Cabinet in fact although constitutional in form.

An associate of De Gaulle's who is reliably reported to have actively participated in the preparations of a putsch in Algiers is General de Gaulle's military cabinet.

A few hours before the new celebrated De Gaulle broadcast De Gaulle happily informed his friends over the phone, from his office, that the insurgents' victory was assured. The President is not likely to appreciate this kind of Trojan strategy, and the insurgents are not likely to meet De Gaulle at the next press conference at the Elysee.

Another officer who will have to be used to a new and less prominent job is Colonel Yves Godard, Director-General of the Bureau in Algeria since May 1958, and the man who was responsible for De Gaulle's safety during his Algerian visits. The President will not be inclined to leave his personal safety and the responsibility for police actions in Algeria in the hands of this officer, who was nominated to his job on the insistence of General Massu and used to be extremely "discreet" on the activities of the extremist Algerian colonel organizations in his reports to the President's authorities. His replacement by a civilian officer is considered here symbolic of the final liquidation of "May 13" rule in Algeria.

Psychological Bureau The reorganization of the army command in Algeria is being carried out under the cover of military secrecy, but nonetheless several officers have been semi-officially ordered to have been relieved of their functions or even arrested.

Among these is Colonel Gardes, the head of the Fifth Bureau, the action psychology, in Algeria. This branch, instead of doing its duty of "selling" the Government's policy to the population, is said to have been engaged in propaganda opposing self-determination and clamouring for integration. Colonel Gardes, who was seen standing at M. Ortis's side on the balcony of the building of the "Compagnie Algerienne" during the uprising, is being replaced by a more reliable officer, with a better understanding of the psychology of General de Gaulle, in the course of the army command reorganization being carried out by the new Minister of Armed Forces, the liberal M. Pierre Messmer.

Among those arrested in France itself is a man who had great influence on Colonel Gardes and his friends in the army's psychological service. His name is Georges Sauge, founder and head of the Superior Centre for the Study of Social Psychology, this anti-Semitic ex-Communist, serving extreme right Catholic circles, because of his ideological of a very dry martini, expensive cigarette smoke, and even more expensive Chinese silk. Mme Sauge's husband, who is still a member of the Wall Street crash with equal equanimity, and into all this is thrown a bereaved nephew entrusted to make M. Guy Mollet Foreign Minister has been dropped for the moment — mainly because of the position of the left wing in the Socialist leadership — the U.N.R. may well soon become the specialists' partner in a coalition.

Little is yet known about one of the most interesting chapters of the inquiry now going on in France — the "Lille Conspiracy." Tons of material have been confiscated by the authorities, in an effort to lay bare the whole truth about a vast network which was preparing an armed uprising in northern France, probably during De Gaulle's forthcoming visit to the U.S.

The group of Georges Sauge is not the only one in France animated by the "National Catholic spirit"; all these groups are considered dangerous by responsible Church leaders.

One of the men who burnt his fingers during the fate of the Algerians during the week of the Algiers uprising is Pierre Dervigne, President of the Paris Municipal Council. He is sure to be of being on the right side that he not only hurried to inform insurgents of his "fraternal union with them, in thought and heart," but he also let the President of the Republic know that "Algeria is a French province, which we will never abandon." Three other members of the Paris Municipal Council were not less outspoken, and they now face expulsion from the U.N.R. (Gaullist Party). The U.N.R. in general, rather surprisingly, showed little weakness in the face of the Algerian insurgency and may now claim the title of a centre party and no longer a party of the right. OPERA FACTS

Editor, The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — There are certain vital facts concerning the production of opera in Israel which should be made clear to the public and after reading your editorial on February 7, I feel it my duty to make these points clear.

When the I.P.O. was playing at the Ohel Shalom Hall, they claimed that the hall was too small to serve additional thousands of concert-goers; hence the need for the large new Concert Hall in Tel Aviv.

'Figaro'—A Feast of Sound

Cherubino Count Almaviva Don Basilio Dr. Bartolo

Israel Philharmonic Orchestra, conducted by Carlo Maria Giulini (Mass Auditorium, February 13). "Le Nozze di Figaro" Opera in Four Acts by Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. Libretto by Lorenzo da Ponte.

First performance of this opera (Mozart's greatest), on May 1, 1786, took place in Vienna only after violent controversies which bear some similarity with our own. The debate then was purely on account of the political implications of the original plot, and the opera had to receive the Emperor's consent, which he gave only reluctantly, while in our case... well, the story is too well known to be discussed here, and this is for certain not the business of a music critic.

But musically, the opera was a tremendous event. Tremendous above all because there is hardly another operatic enterprise in the whole world that can put such an accomplished orchestral body into a plot, except perhaps in Vienna where the Philharmonic plays for the Staatsoper as well. And then, where are the permanent Opera companies that can permit themselves to fill even the least important roles with such first-rate singers that are at the same time excellent soloists? And here, there were no less than eleven.

In the main lead was Giorgio Tadeo (Figaro), a powerful but warm-voiced and sparkling lover who seemed to enjoy his every moment on stage. Teamed with him was Mariella Adami whose excellent clear voice and youthful grace enhanced a beautiful Suzanne both in singing and acting. Ilva Ligabue — Soubrette Almaviva — acted and sang fluently in the part of the opening Cavatina in the second act, but it was certainly Stefano Malagu (Messa-Soprano Cherubino) who in act four, displaying verve in his singing and putting on an act that had an exhilarating effect. Vittorio Masini (Marcellina) and Laila Mandelli (as Barbarina) completed the female parts with deserving credit. Paolo Pedani made a believable Count Almaviva through his singing was not always up to the standard of the other singers, especially in the opening Terzetto. On the other hand, the supporting parts of Dr. Bartolo (the Bass-Baritone Marcello Cortis), Don Basilio (the Tenor Hugues Cuendet), Antonio (Baritone Umberto Borghi) and Don Curzio (Tenor Mario Carlini) were all well done.

Gary Bertini has accomplished an excellent job in preparing a reduced Rinald Choir that amalgamated most naturally within the show thanks to an original misadventure by Maurice Sarrasin. The main credit, of course, goes to Maestro Giulini, who kept the whole performance under his firm control and under whose baton the orchestra sounded like a Stradivarius instrument. In short, a feast of glorious sounds, glamorous costumes, ingenious setting and, above all, heavenly music. AVIDOM

First performance of this opera (Mozart's greatest), on May 1, 1786, took place in Vienna only after violent controversies which bear some similarity with our own. The debate then was purely on account of the political implications of the original plot, and the opera had to receive the Emperor's consent, which he gave only reluctantly, while in our case... well, the story is too well known to be discussed here, and this is for certain not the business of a music critic.

But musically, the opera was a tremendous event. Tremendous above all because there is hardly another operatic enterprise in the whole world that can put such an accomplished orchestral body into a plot, except perhaps in Vienna where the Philharmonic plays for the Staatsoper as well. And then, where are the permanent Opera companies that can permit themselves to fill even the least important roles with such first-rate singers that are at the same time excellent soloists? And here, there were no less than eleven.

In the main lead was Giorgio Tadeo (Figaro), a powerful but warm-voiced and sparkling lover who seemed to enjoy his every moment on stage. Teamed with him was Mariella Adami whose excellent clear voice and youthful grace enhanced a beautiful Suzanne both in singing and acting. Ilva Ligabue — Soubrette Almaviva — acted and sang fluently in the part of the opening Cavatina in the second act, but it was certainly Stefano Malagu (Messa-Soprano Cherubino) who in act four, displaying verve in his singing and putting on an act that had an exhilarating effect. Vittorio Masini (Marcellina) and Laila Mandelli (as Barbarina) completed the female parts with deserving credit. Paolo Pedani made a believable Count Almaviva through his singing was not always up to the standard of the other singers, especially in the opening Terzetto. On the other hand, the supporting parts of Dr. Bartolo (the Bass-Baritone Marcello Cortis), Don Basilio (the Tenor Hugues Cuendet), Antonio (Baritone Umberto Borghi) and Don Curzio (Tenor Mario Carlini) were all well done.

Gary Bertini has accomplished an excellent job in preparing a reduced Rinald Choir that amalgamated most naturally within the show thanks to an original misadventure by Maurice Sarrasin. The main credit, of course, goes to Maestro Giulini, who kept the whole performance under his firm control and under whose baton the orchestra sounded like a Stradivarius instrument. In short, a feast of glorious sounds, glamorous costumes, ingenious setting and, above all, heavenly music. AVIDOM
